RECOMMENDATION - AdminConsultWiki

Hereby I would like to express a recommendation regarding the innovative approach and results of the project Administrative Consultation Wiki (ACW), run in Slovenia from 2009 by the Ministry of public administration and justice and Faculty of Administration, University of Ljubljana.

ACW has been designed as a research and development project, as represented among other opportunities in the annual European Group of Public Administration (EGPA) conference in Malta (2009), within permanent study group Law and Public Administration, which I have been co-directing for several years.

The project has at once attracted the full attention of the permanent study group's members (academic scholars and practitioners from different European countries) due to its basic characteristics like offering unified cognitive interpretation source for public organization and tangible help to clients, connecting new findings of legal and computer sciences etc. ASW is without doubt highly innovative on EU level.

Moreover, in the following years of ACW operating concrete results of ACW proved the project to be successful as planned – delivering the value added to the (Slovene) administrative system for different participants, from clients to officials and academia. Hence, ACW contributes to the efficiency of public policies and the protection of citizens' rights by enabling their participation in authoritative decision-making.

I strongly believe that the project is to be given further attention and resources to be able to develop in Slovenia and further.
